DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION SPLIT OVER NOMINATION

New York Delegates Battle Over Attorney General

SYRACUSE, Sept. 29.—Although it had been heralded as a "loose feast," the Democratic state convention which opens here today is faced with a bitter fight over the nomination for attorney general.

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, who will be renominated at the closing session tomorrow, frankly admitted this morning after he had conferred with the Democratic chiefs for nearly five hours, that he did not have the slightest idea who would be nominated for the state's chief law officer.

In the meantime there were all sorts of rumors afloat of a possible break between Roosevelt and Tammany Hall because of his telegram to Mayor James J. Walker suggesting that all city officials, who previously have refused to waive immunity when called to testify in the Ewald-Healy case "return voluntarily to the grand jury room, waive immunity and freely answer all questions relating to their official acts."

These reports were denied by those close to Roosevelt as well as friends of Tammany Leader John F. Curry.

Several Tammany leaders, however, who did not learn of the governor's action until they arrived here last night, frankly admitted they were surprised.

When the door leading into Governor Roosevelt's hotel suite opened shortly before 2 a. m. today, former Governor Smith, wearing the familiar brown derby, walked out.

"What happened, Governor?" he was asked.

"I'll tell you a funny story," he countered.

He did and it had nothing to do with politics.

"Further than that deponent knoweth nothing," he added, starting for his room.

When the leaders found they were not able to agree on the nominee for attorney general they started putting the final touches on the state platform.

One plank, it was learned, will call for repeal of the eighteenth amendment "without any strings attached."

United States Senator Robert F. Wagner will be the keynote speaker at the opening session of the convention. An adjournment will then be taken, until tonight when John W. Davis, will deliver his address as permanent chairman, and the platform will be adopted.

OFFICERS SHOT FOR THIEVES

CLEVELAND, Sept. 29.—Mistaken for chicken thieves, Acting Marshal Edward Wisniewski and Deputy Marshal Ladd Turek of Independence Village, were wounded in the face by buckshot early today.

The shooting occurred on the farm of Fritz Koller, who, having been bothered with chicken robbers recently, called the marshal's office and asked for protection. The two officials set out for the Koller farm.

Koller, peering from a window of his home, saw the two men moving about in the vicinity of his hen house. Deciding they were thieves, he took down his shotgun and opened fire. He got his men, but they weren't the thieves. They were Wisniewski and Turek. Koller was exonerated of all blame.

The Jones machine turned over three times when it hit loose gravel after Dr. Jones lost control at the wheel.

BOY BANDITS KILL FARMER TO GET $17

MARTINS FERRY, O., Sept. 29.—Shot a week ago by two boy-bandits who robbed him of $17 in a hold-up west of here, James Meeker, 60, Colerain farmer, died today in Martins Ferry Hospital.

WIDOW RUNS AMUCK IN COURTROOM

She missed her mark but severely wounded H. Z. Wedgwood, U. S. commissioner, upper left, and attempted to shoot an attorney, Mrs. Douthitt, who was suing for damages in certain litigation and was acting as her own attorney, entertained an obsession that the world was against her, police say. She was acquitted 25 years ago of murdering her husband.

AUTO RACER KILLED WHEN TURNING CAR; HALT AKRON EVENTS

Rotting Board Track Ends Races After Fatality

AKRON, O., Sept. 29.—Rotted boards on the Akron-Cleveland Speedway which caused a halt to be called in the 100-mile gold cup race yesterday on the eighty-first mile, today had brought a refusal of American Automobile Association officials to sanction further races on the track.

One driver was killed during the race, but the accident in which he met death was not due to the large holes which were ground into the track by the racing machines, officials stated. The officials, however, brought a sudden halt to the race for fear that additional accidents would result from the rotted condition of the board runway.

Joe Molnar, 30, of Detroit, met his death on the twenty-second lap of the race when his machine swerved, and turned three somersaults. Speeding past the judges stand, Molnar was given the flag to pull to the side so that other drivers could pass him. When he turned his wheels, the machine overturned, witnesses said. He was taken to City Hospital but was dead on arrival. Death was caused by a fractured skull, broken neck and punctured lung, physicians said.

Wilbur Shaw of Philadelphia, driving a Miller Special, was awarded the victory in the race. He was 220 yards in the lead when the contest was called off at the eighty-first mile. The time was one hour, thirteen minutes, thirty-three seconds. Eugene Haustra in a Pontiac Special placed second, and a Fronty Bost in a Fronty Special, third.

TWO TIMID BANDITS ESCAPE WITH $300

LAKE BLUFF, Ill., Sept. 29.—Two amateurish bandits whose revolvers shook dangerously in their hands made good their escape after a night raid on the William V. Kelley mansion in which they terrorized the multimillionaire printing press magnate and his wife and servants and escaped with a loot of $300.

The pair fled in panic when a lookout signaled them as a car wheeled into the Kelley driveway by mistake, then backed out and went away. The timely arrival of the automobile, police believe, interrupted the bandits' well-organized plan to strip the home of silverware, jewelry, tapestries and costly furnishings.

Legal Phases Of Electric Question Are Discussed

Letter Sent City Commission By Solicitor Points Out Need Of Fully Understanding Conditions In Light Controversy

For the first time in twenty-five years City Commission is in a position to dictate terms to the Dayton Power and Light Co., in the matter of electric rates.

This is the conclusion drawn from a written communication prepared by City Solicitor William A. Miller, copies of which have been mailed to individual members of the commission, in which the solicitor explains certain legal phases of the present light controversy in view of "grave consequences which may result from a failure to understand fully the circumstances."

With the twenty-five year franchise of the Dayton company expiring this year the question arises as to whether the Commission shall grant a twenty-year renewal of the franchise or a franchise which expires at the same time as the contracts for commercial, residential and street lighting, the city solicitor points out.

Solicitor Miller's communication to the commission, made public Monday, follows:

September 26, 1930. City Commission Xenia, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

After the introduction of the ordinance which is intended to grant to The Dayton Power and Light Company the franchise for the term of twenty (20) years, and the rate ordinance for a term of five (5) years, the Solicitor feels that certain legal consequences should be brought to the attention of the Commission.

In the first place the granting of a franchise and its subsequent acceptance by The Dayton Power and Light Company imposes upon The Dayton Power and Light Company the duty to serve the City of Xenia by furnishing electric energy to such citizens of the city as may require it. In the absence of such a franchise there is no obligation upon The Dayton Power and Light Company to furnish such service.

With these primary principles in mind the Solicitor wishes to apply them to two possible situations which may arise. First, in the event that a franchise is granted for twenty (20) years and a rate ordinance for the term of five (5) years, at the expiration of the term of the rate ordinance the franchise will still have fifteen (15) years to run. Should the City Commission at that time be unable to agree with The Dayton Power and Light Company on a new rate ordinance, such failure to agree would not relieve The Dayton Power and Light Company from its duty to continue its service to the citizens of the city. And in the event of such a disagreement The Dayton Power and Light Company could make an application to the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

NOTED CAPITALIST CALLED; ARRANGE GUGGENHEIM RITES

Aviation Promoter And Philanthropist To Be Buried Tuesday

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Messages of tribute and sympathy from all parts of America were received today by the family of Daniel Guggenheim, the noted mining capitalist, philanthropist and aviation enthusiast, died here Sunday at the age of 74.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Guggenheim was the donor of the $2,500,000 Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics. He was a patron of all the arts and gave quietly and liberally to many charities. Most of his huge gifts were secretly made.

When he died after three days' illness with him were his wife and son, Harry F. Guggenheim, ambassador to Cuba, and his daughter, Mrs. Roger W. Straus. Another son, Colonel M. Robert Guggenheim, was summoned from Washington and former Senator Simon Guggenheim, a brother, is expected to arrive from Europe tomorrow.

It was said more than $6,000,000 was given by Guggenheim for the promotion of aviation.

The Guggenheim fund sponsored and underwrote Col. Lindbergh's good will tour of the nation after his Paris flight.

The multi-millionaire returned from abroad September 15 and had been active until Thursday. He remained in bed that day and seemed to be only slightly ill. While talking to his physician Sunday morning he was seized with a sudden heart attack. He sank back, smiled and closed his eyes. A moment later those watching him realized he was dead.

RECOVER PILOT'S BODY FROM WATERS OF LAKE

Continue Search For Companion Lost In Air Accident

CONNEAUT, O., Sept. 29.—Spurred by the discovery of the body of Willard Parker, pilot of the ill-fated cabin monoplane which crashed into Lake Erie near here after a scant eighty-mile trip from Cleveland airport early Wednesday morning, searchers redoubled their efforts today in the hunt for the body of William McNulty, Columbus, business man, who was a passenger in the craft.

After a two-day search of the shore and lake near here, the body of the dead pilot was discovered yesterday by Henry Jarvie, a farmer, about one and a half miles east of Conneaut Harbor.

The body was coatless, indicating that Parker had removed his coat in an effort to swim. A watch found on the body had stopped at 2:18. Parker and McNulty left Cleveland at 1:30 a. m. Wednesday. The body was identified by Dick Sawtelle, Parker's former pupil, and Dan Foltz, a friend of the pilot.

Search for the bodies of the flyers was centered in this vicinity following the discovery of the wreckage of the monoplane early Saturday. The battered remnants of the plane had been washed ashore by a lake gale. A leather aviator's coat, apparently Parker's, was found in the wreckage.

Parker was hired by McNulty to pilot the plane, which had been rented from the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service in Columbus, to Buffalo. McNulty had flown to Cleveland Tuesday and on his arrival, had ordered equipment installed for night flying. Airport officials contend that McNulty had no authority to engage any pilot other than John Corradi, who had flown the ship to Cleveland.

ABANDON HOPE FOR MISSING FRUIT PACKET

Believe Freighter Is Sunk; Six Thought To Have Perished

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—All hope of finding the fruit packet North Shore, which has been missing with all on board since the recent storm swept Lake Michigan, was abandoned today after a search by boat and airplane failed to locate the ship.

That the freighter sank thirty miles off Racine, Wis., was the opinion of Captain W. E. Preston, of the Grand Haven, Mich., coast guard station at the conclusion of a two day search. Captain Preston reported sighting wreckage yesterday which he identified as part of the North Shore. No bodies were recovered.

Six persons were aboard the fruit packet when it set out from the Michigan shore with a load of grapes. Among the six believed lost are Captain Erwin Anderson and his bride of two weeks and a crew of four. The voyage was a honeymoon trip for Anderson and his wife.

W. J. Laurie of Milwaukee, owner of the boat, directed the search for six hours yesterday from an airplane. Three other airplanes joined in the hunt while eight coast guard cutters cruised about.

MYSTERY THRILLER STARTS IN GAZETTE SOON

A GAY house-party is under way while all is revelry within, a terrific storm is taking place outside. In this setting a brilliant young poet, disappears.

Here are the makings of a mystery story. With this beginning John Hawk, celebrated writer of mystery tales, has woven a fascinating tale of intrigue to startle and amaze readers of THE GAZETTE as cooler weather increases the popularity of fireside reading.

The element of mystery hinges largely around a locked door, which serves to mystify the detective. For this reason Hawk calls his story, "IT WAS LOCKED" and it begins in this paper this week, amply and beautifully illustrated and in large, fat daily installments.

With the beginning of the ascendancy of S. S. Van Dine, a nom de plume for one of America's most celebrated mystery writers, the mystery story came back into popularity with a bang. A modern novel without a murder or two does not contain sufficient thrill for this thrilling-loving age. Motion pictures have been keen to see the possibilities and mystery pictures have been among the most popular of recent releases.

With the nation crying for mystery and more mystery, Hawk has been winning a name for himself in this branch of fiction. His "The Murder of a Mystery Writer" and "The House of Sudden Sleep" have been captivating readers. William Lyon Phelps says "It Was Locked" is a story in which the detective as well as the reader is puzzled to the last.

Begin this fascinating story this week and continue it daily in THE GAZETTE through sixty installments.

DISCOVER SUICIDE AND MURDER ATTACK IN CAPITAL HOTEL

Marine Corps Officer Believed Victim Of Tropic Fever

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 29.—Due to return to his post in Haiti when his present furlough expired, Lieut. Col. Richard P. Creecy of the Marine Corps brutally hacked his wife's head with a hatchet and the fired a bullet into his left breast yesterday.

The body of the husband and the unconscious form of his wife of twenty years was found in their suite at the Hotel Mayflower after repeated telephone calls to the rooms were unanswered. Mrs. Creecy had not regained consciousness today at Emory Hospital.

Relatives could advance no motive for the act, except the possibility that he might have been suffering from tropical fever. They visited relatives of Mrs. Creecy in Westminster, Md., last week and appeared in excellent spirits. Members of the husband's family here also said the two were cheerful when they called upon them. The Creecys arrived in the United States from Haiti, September 19 and registered at the hotel September 24.

Hotel attendants said a sign reading "Don't Disturb" was tacked on the door of the Creecy suite. As the day progressed the management called the apartment to get permission for a chambermaid to enter. When the calls were not answered the assistant manager entered the rooms with a passkey. Physicians said Creecy had been dead for several hours, probably since early Sunday.

On the bottom of the "don't disturb" sign the following was written in ink: "Call J. L. Reifsnider at Westminster, Md." Reifsnider is a brother of Mrs. Creecy. He and other relatives are waiting at her bedside for her to regain consciousness and tell what prompted her husband's actions.

Born here on March 5, 1881, Creecy was commissioned an officer of the marine corps in 1903 and was made a lieutenant colonel in 1924. Two years later he was commissioned an assistant adjutant and inspector general.

A flick of a coin prevented him from going up with Orville Wright when the latter was demonstrating his airplane in 1909. He took "heads" with Lieutenant Selfridge for whom Selfridge Field, Mich., is named. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Creecy, this city. The coroner has issued a certificate of suicide and attempted murder.

BISHOP CANNON TO FACE NEW CHARGES

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Facing another storm in his spectacular career, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, will arrive in New York today from Brazil. He is a passenger on the liner American Legion with his bride, the former Helen McCallum.

On his arrival here the bishop was expected to make a statement in connection with the charges made against him by four clergymen. The nature of the charges had never been made public, it merely being stated they involved "impropriety and unministerial conduct."

Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman of Baltimore, one of the four, said that a committee to investigate the charges against Bishop Cannon will be named early in October.

BROMLEY PLANNING PACIFIC FLIGHT

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Lieutenant Harold Bromley, American aviator, who has made several futile attempts to cross the Pacific from Japan to the United States or vice-versa, today announced he contemplated another try for mid-October.

According to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Tokyo, Bromley flew his plane, the City of Tacoma, to Tokyo and made repairs and overhauling. He was quoted as planning a mid-October take-off from Samushiro Beach.

On his last attempt, he was 1,200 miles out over the Pacific before engine trouble forced him and his companion, Harold Gatty, to return.

HOOVER THE AUTHOR

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—President Hoover appeared today in the role of author and an authority on fish life with the publication of his book, "A Remedy For Disappearing Game Fishes." The volume contains only forty-one pages and the edition is limited to 900 copies.

The price is three or four times the cost of the usual book and one could buy a very good trout rod for the same money.

RECOVER BODY

The body of Willard Parker, above, Cleveland pilot, has been washed ashore from Lake Erie and search continued for William McNulty, below, Columbus business man. They were believed lost in a plane trip over Lake Erie.

LEGAL PHASES OF LIGHT QUESTION ARE DISCUSSED

Ohio for the Utilities Commission to fix a rate to be charged the citizens for the electricity supplied by the city did not like the rate fixed by the Public Utilities Commission its only recourse would be to bring suit against the Utilities Commission in the courts and have the courts determine whether or not the Utilities Commission rate is reasonable.

On the other hand, if the franchise expired at the same time the rate contract expired an entirely different situation would exist. This is the situation which exists at present, and which constitutes the second application of the general principles referred to above. At present the franchise ordinance and rate ordinance are both in force.

If the City Commission does not grant a franchise to The Dayton Power and Light Company, The Dayton Power and Light Company will no longer have a duty to supply the City of Xenia with electrical energy. Neither does it have the right to go to the Public Utilities Commission and continue its service under rates fixed by the Public Utilities Commission. In such a condition of affairs The Dayton Power and Light Company and the City Commission must either agree harmoniously upon a franchise and a rate or else the Dayton Power and Light Company must eventually withdraw its service from the City of Xenia. Should the City Commission and The Dayton Power and Light Company not be able to agree upon rates, nor upon a franchise, the Light Company would have no further duty to serve the citizens of this city, and would have the privilege of withdrawing their service. This, however, must be qualified because the city could enjoin the withdrawal, in view of the public necessity, until such time as the service rendered by The Dayton Power and Light Company could be supplied by another company or by a municipal plant, or until the two parties could agree upon a franchise and rate ordinance.

The above applies to lighting and power in general. In the particular instance of the street lights under other statutes the city cannot legally pay for street lighting unless there is an actual contract in existence for such payment. The laws in regard to city finances make this requirement.

The solicitor has taken the liberty of bringing these facts to the attention of the Commission in view of the grave consequences which may result from a failure to understand fully the circumstances.

The solicitor would be glad to discuss the matter individually with members of the Commission at any time the Commissioners may so desire.

Yours very truly,
Wm. A. Miller,
City Solicitor.

CORPORATION EARNINGS AND REPORTS

Article No. 4

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Intelligent investing presupposes reliable and accurate information about the corporations standing behind the securities selected.

This is the first essential, though it is also important to consider general economic and financial conditions in the country in which the corporation operates; the nature and character of its products; the extent of its markets; the possibility of expansion or contraction in these markets and of the possible increase or decrease of prices in competition with other producers.

It is obvious that the investor faces a good many handicaps in his quest for knowledge and information concerning the above details. Huge corporations which employ billions of dollars of capital and sell a billion dollars' worth of goods or services every year, of necessity provide problems of great magnitude for the accountant as well as the investor. Such an industrial giant must embark upon its year's activities with huge obligations, financial and otherwise. It is dependent upon the public reception of its products to insure the continuation of the enormous income needed to cover these expenses and to pay wages to workmen and dividends to stockholders.

It is conceivable that in the period between issuance of annual and semi-annual reports, great changes may have taken place in the economic world affecting the welfare of the concern. The general investing public cannot be put into possession of these facts as soon as, or as thoroughly as, those who are managing the enterprise—insiders, so-called.

The New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges, together with banking organizations of various kinds are exerting every effort to secure prompt and reliable information for the use of the investing public. No corporation can list its securities on the New York Stock Exchange until it complies with a series of strict regulations, including the publication of a semi-annual financial report. This report summarizes income and expenditures for the period under review as well as a complete compilation of its assets and liabilities.

The Interstate Commerce Commission and the various State utilities commissions require monthly reports and statements from the railroads and utility corporations of the country which supply the needs of the American public. Through the medium of these reports it is possible for the stockholder to keep in close touch with actual happenings from the financial and income standpoint and to base calculations thereon. Even with the issuance of such statements, however, it is not always possible for the shrewdest investors to calculate with any degree of accuracy the probable net income of the corporation over an extended period.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

Periods when farming is having a trying time of it are always favorable to the idea of co-operative selling. It was so in 1920 and 1921, when prices of farm products took a sickening slide from the high water levels.

It is likely to be so again this year and next, or as long as the present situation lasts.

When times are good and farm products are selling freely at satisfactory prices, many farm people are disposed to let well enough alone.

They have good outlets for their stuff, their personal relations with buyers are pleasant, they make a sale and get the money, and in general know just where they stand. To abandon such a system, which has come down from past ages, means a great deal of a mental wrench. It is far easier when troubles appear—when buyers afraid of lower prices can hardly be induced to take the farmer's product at any price.

At such times the farmer turns over in his mind what he knows of co-operative selling—the great Canadian wheat pool, the seasoned California co-operatives, the example of such co-operative nations as Denmark and Switzerland. He is more than half inclined to try it.

It happens that such a period coincides with the activities of the Federal Farm Board, established specially to build up co-operative selling, and with a time when the co-ops themselves are easing up on some of their policies.

Seven or eight years ago the usual co-operative selling organization felt it necessary to tie up its members with three-year or five-year, iron-clad contracts. The "pool" felt that it must be sure of a certain volume of milk, or tobacco, or potatoes, or whatever product it handled. Members could not resign, and were penalized if they sold their stuff elsewhere.

Whether such a rigid system was ever necessary is a question. But the universal tendency in recent years has been to make it almost as easy for a member to get out as to get in. Indeed, in some cases it is easier.

Most co-operatives now try to hold their membership not by long-term contracts but by giving good selling service, fair prices and by preaching co-operative selling as the only way for agriculture to gain bargaining power.

To these arguments can now be added the powerful influence of the Farm Board, backed by half a billion dollars. The Board must and will throw every advantage it can to members of co-operatives. There will be no grand rush to join the co-ops, no doubt. But certainly they will be growing faster than ever before, in the next couple of years.

SOVIET NEWSPAPER CONDEMNS CRITICISM OF GRAIN DUMPING

MOSCOW, Sept. 29.—The present outcry against alleged "dumping" of grain on foreign markets by the Soviet was bitterly condemned today by the newspaper Pravda, official Communist organ.

The charges of "dumping," the publication declared, can be explained as a new wave of poison gas attack on the Soviet government and "an imperialistic attempt to stir up world sentiment and war against the Soviet regime."

While not directly denying the charges of glutting the world grain market, Pravda asserted that the Soviet foreign trade this year amounted to less than two per cent of the entire world trade.

Indicating that Russia would continue exporting grain, M. Kallinin of the central government declared that the credit and machinery available to industries would be cut off and their leaders arrested unless those certain ones refusing to sell the government grain changed their attitude. The September grain purchases, he revealed, have already fallen 30 per cent behind the quota specified under the five-year industrial plan.

The association voted to sponsor a Sunday School officers and teachers standard training class to be held in November, probably at the U. B. Church property, the former Xenia Seminary buildings. The arrangements are in charge of the Rev. A. H. Beardsley, the Rev. S. L. Brill and the Rev. A. G. Lebold. Four Veterans Of Greene County's Regiment Meet

"Bring the good old bugle, boys, we'll sing another song."

To the strains of that old war song, "Marching Through Georgia" a reunion of veterans of the 74th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, of the Civil War, opened at the Court House Saturday morning. The ranks of the 74th, known as Greene County's own regiment as its members were all recruited from this county, are thinning fast and only four former members of that Civil War unit were able to be present at Saturday's reunion.

Veterans of the 74th present Saturday were: C. N. Smith, Co. A, Jamestown; J. W. Devore, Co. H, Wilmington; George H. Moore, Co. D, Xenia and S. T. Baker, Co. A, Cedarville. A number of veterans from other regiments were guests at the reunion during the day.

Following the opening song, members joined in the Lord's Prayer; the chaplain of the regiment, H. H. Cassell, Vandalia, having died during the past year. Capt. Harold H. Hays, superintendent of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, extended greetings to the veterans and spoke of the part they had taken in the formation of the state institution. He extended an invitation for the veterans to visit the Home at any time. Capt. Hays then introduced Miss E. Jane Bailey, Wapakoneta, secretary of the board of trustees, of the Home, who spoke briefly.

Mrs. J. T. Charters, president of the 74th reunion association, presented a tablet to the memory of veterans of the 74th Regiment, which has been given by relatives and has been placed at the door at the south entrance to the Court House, R. W. Owens, Dayton, whose father, grandfather and a number of uncles fought in the Civil War, gave a short talk and described the scenes of the old battlefields, which he had visited this summer.

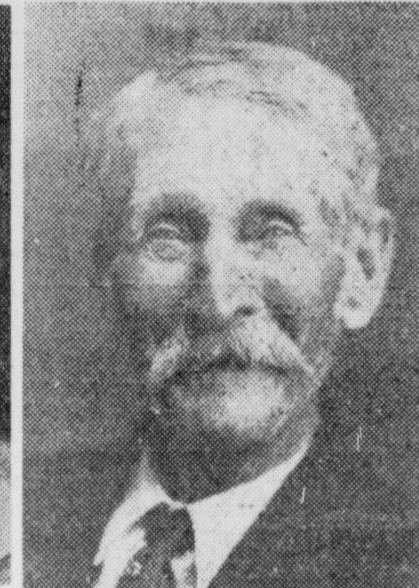

Dinner was served at noon by the Daughters of Veterans and thirty covers were placed at the tables. Following the dinner a short memorial service was held for departed members—those who have died since the last reunion of the regiment. Members honored at the memorial were David Elder, Co. F, Springfield; H. H. Cassell, Co. F, Vandalia; James Howard, Co. C, Denver, Colo.; and W. R. Coon, Co. H, Alhambra, Calif. A number of cornet solos including old-time war songs, were played by Elmer Spahr.

The main feature of the afternoon's program was an address by the Rev. James P. Lytle, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church, who used as his subject, "What New America May Learn From the Veterans of the Civil War."

The three lessons to be learned, the Rev. Mr. Lytle said, are: the lesson of obedience, keeping fit and strong and the will to win and the necessity of a goal. At the close of the Rev. Mr. Lytle's address, Mrs. Paul Owens gave a reading, "What William Henry Did Next" and responded with an encore. Mrs. Foy Coffelt, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. J. C. Denham, sang a group of war songs, which were well received.

At the close of the meeting a campfire was held and short talks were given by S. T. Baker, D. R. Brewer and Mr. Illiffe.

That is the question the middle-aged person asks about. The problem becomes more serious with the years. Soon it seems it will be "not to read." No one wants that to happen. So someone is consulted who furnishes "ability to read." Then the question is answered. We have a satisfactory reading service.

Ohio for the Utilities Commission to fix a rate to be charged the citizens for the electricity supplied. If the city did not like the rate fixed by the Public Utilities Commission its only recourse would be to bring suit against the Utilities Commission in the courts and have the courts determine whether or not the Utilities Commission rate is reasonable.

On the other hand, if the franchise expired at the same time the rate contract expired an entirely different situation would exist. This is the situation which exists at present, and which constitutes the second application of the general principles referred to above. At present the franchise ordinance and rate ordinance both expire.

If the City Commission does not grant a franchise to The Dayton Power and Light Company, The Dayton Power and Light Company will no longer have a duty to supply the City of Xenia with electrical energy. Neither does it have the right to go to the Public Utilities Commission and continue its service under rates fixed by the Public Utilities Commission. In such a condition of affairs The Dayton Power and Light Company and the City Commission must either agree harmoniously upon a franchise and a rate or else The Dayton Power and Light Company must eventually withdraw its service from the City of Xenia. Should the City Commission and The Dayton Power and Light Company not be able to agree upon rates, not upon a franchise, the Light Company would have no further duty to serve the citizens of this city, and would have the privilege of withdrawing their service. This, however, must be qualified because the city could enjoin the withdrawal, in view of the public necessity, until such time as the service rendered by The Dayton Power and Light Company could be supplied by another company or by a municipal plant, or until the two parties could agree upon a franchise and rate ordinance.

The above applies to lighting and power in general, in the particular instance of the street lights under other statutes the city cannot legally pay for street lighting unless there is an actual contract in existence for such payment. The laws in regard to city finances make this requirement.

The solicitor has taken the liberty of bringing these facts to the attention of the Commission in view of the grave consequences which may result from a failure to understand fully the circumstances.

The solicitor would be glad to discuss the matter individually with members of the Commission at any time the Commissioners may so desire.

Yours very truly,
Wm. A. Miller,
City Solicitor.

CORPORATION EARNINGS
AND REPORTS

Article No. 4

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Intelligent investing presupposes reliable and accurate information about the corporations standing behind the securities selected.

This is the first essential, though it is also important to consider general economic and financial conditions in the country in which the corporation operates; the nature and character of its products; the extent of its markets; the possibility of expansion or contraction in these markets and of the possible increase or decrease of prices in competition with other producers.

It is obvious that the investor faces a good many handicaps in his quest for knowledge and information concerning the above details. Huge corporations which employ billions of dollars of capital and sell a billion dollars' worth of goods or services every year, of necessity provide problems of great magnitude for the accountant as well as the investor. Such an industrial giant must embark upon its year's activities with huge obligations, financial and otherwise. It is dependent upon the public reception of its products to insure the continuation of the enormous income needed to cover these expenses and to pay wages to workmen and dividends to stockholders.

It is conceivable that in the period between issuance of annual and semi-annual reports, great changes may have taken place in the economic world affecting the welfare of the concern. The general investing public cannot be put into possession of these facts as soon as, or as thoroughly as, those who are managing the enterprise—insiders, so-called.

The New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges, together with banking organizations of various kinds are exerting every effort to secure prompt and reliable information for the use of the investing public. No corporation can list its securities on the New York Stock Exchange until it complies with a series of strict regulations, including the publication of a semi-annual financial report. This report summarizes income and expenditures for the period under review as well as a complete compilation of its assets and liabilities.

The Interstate Commerce Commission and the various State utilities commissions require monthly reports and statements from the railroads and utility corporations of the country which supply the needs of the American public. Through the medium of these reports it is possible for the stockholder to keep in close touch with actual happenings from the financial and income standpoint and to base calculations thereon. Even with the issuance of such statements, however, it is not always possible for the shrewdest investors to calculate with any degree of accuracy the probable net income of the corporation over an extended period.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

Periods when farming is having a trying time of it are always favorable to the idea of co-operative selling. It was so in 1920 and 1921, when prices of farm products took a sickening slide from the high war levels.

It is likely to be so again this year and next, or as long as the present situation lasts.

When times are good and farm products are selling freely at satisfactory prices, many farm people are disposed to let well enough alone.

They have good outlets for their stuff, their personal relations with buyers are pleasant, they make a sale and get the money, and in general know just where they stand.

To abandon such a system, which has come down from past ages, means a great deal of a mental wrench. It is far easier when troubles appear—when buyers afraid of lower prices can hardly be induced to take the farmer's product at any price.

At such times the farmer turns over in his mind what he knows of co-operative selling—the great Canadian wheat pool, the seasoned California co-operatives, the example of such co-operative nations as Denmark and Switzerland. He is more than half inclined to try it.

It happens that such a period coincides with the activities of the Federal Farm Board, established specially to build up co-operative selling, and with a time when the co-ops themselves are easing up on some of their policies.

Seven or eight years ago the usual co-operative selling organization felt it necessary to tie up its members with three-year or five-year iron-clad contracts. The "pool" felt that it must be sure of a certain volume of milk, or tobacco, or potatoes, or whatever product it handled. Members could not resign, and were penalized if they sold their stuff elsewhere.

Whether such a rigid system was ever necessary is a question. But the universal tendency in recent years has been to make it almost as easy for a member to get out as to get in. Indeed, in some cases it is easier.

Most co-operatives now try to hold their membership not by long-term contracts but by giving good selling service, fair prices and by preaching co-operative selling as the only way for agriculture to gain bargaining power.

To these arguments can now be added the powerful influence of the Farm Board, backed by half a billion dollars. The Board must and will throw every advantage it can to members of co-operatives.

There will be no grand rush to join the co-ops, no doubt. But certainly they will be growing faster than ever before, in the next couple of years.

SOVIET NEWSPAPER CONDEMNS CRITICISM OF GRAIN DUMPING

MOSCOW, Sept. 29.—The present outcry against alleged "dumping" of grain on foreign markets by the Soviet was bitterly condemned today by the newspaper Pravda, official Communist organ. The charges of "dumping," the publication declared, can be explained as a new wave of poison gas attack on the Soviet government and "an imperialist attempt to stir up world sentiment and war against the Soviet regime."

While not directly denying the charges of glutting the world grain market, Pravda asserted that the Soviet foreign trade this year amounted to less than two per cent of the entire world trade.

Indicating that Russia would continue exporting grain, M. Kallinin of the central government declared that the credit and machinery available to industries would be cut off and their leaders arrested unless those certain ones refused to sell the government grain changed their attitude. The September grain purchases, he revealed, have already fallen 30 per cent behind the quota specified under the five-year industrial plan.

Four Veterans Of Greene County's Regiment Meet

"Bring the good old bugle, boys, we'll sing another song."

To the strains of that old war song, "Marching Through Georgia," a reunion of veterans of the 74th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, of the Civil War, opened at the Court House Saturday morning.

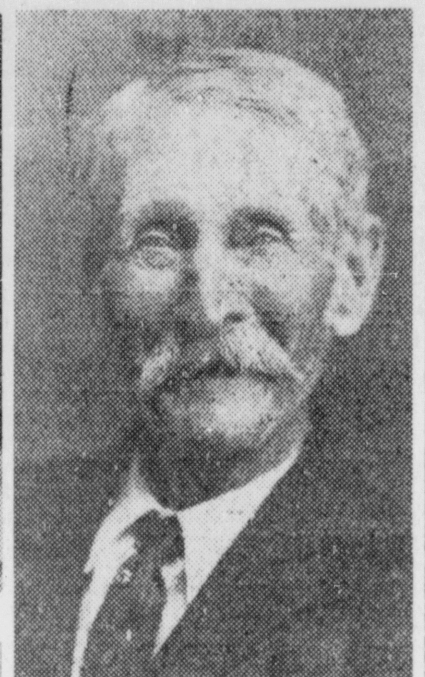

The ranks of the 74th, known as Greene County's own regiment as its members were all recruited from this county, are thinning fast and only four former members of that Civil War unit were able to be present at Saturday's reunion.

Veterans of the 74th present Saturday were: C. N. Smith, Co. A, Jamestown; J. W. Devoe, Co. H, Wilmington; George H. Moore, Co. D, Xenia and S. T. Baker, Co. A, Cedarville. A number of veterans from other regiments were guests at the reunion during the day.

Following the opening song, members joined in the Lord's Prayer; the chaplain of the regiment, H. H. Cassell, Vandalia, having died during the past year. Capt. Harold H. Hays, superintendent of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, extended greetings to the veterans and spoke of the part they had taken in the formation of the state institution. He extended an invitation for the veterans to visit the Home at any time. Capt. Hays then introduced Miss E. Jane Bailey, Wapakoneta, secretary of the board of trustees, of the Home, who spoke briefly.

Mrs. J. T. Charters, president of the 74th reunion association, presented a tablet to the memory of veterans of the 74th Regiment, which has been given by relatives and has been placed at the door of the south entrance to the Court House. R. W. Owens, Dayton, whose father, grandfather and a number of uncles fought in the Civil War, gave a short talk and described the scenes of the old battlefields, which he had visited this summer.

Dinner was served at noon by the Daughters of Veterans and thirty covers were placed at the tables. Following the dinner a short memorial service was held for departed members—those who have died since the last reunion of the regiment. Members honored at the memorial were David Elder, Co. F, Springfield; H. H. Cassell, Co. F, Vandalia; James Howard, Co. C, Denver, Colo.; and W. R. Coon, Co. H, Alhambra, Calif. A number of cornet solos including the old-time war songs, were played by Elmer Spahr.

The main feature of the afternoon's program was an address by the Rev. James P. Lytle, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church, who used as his subject, "What New America May Learn From the Veterans of the Civil War." The three lessons to be learned, the Rev. Mr. Lytle said, are: the lesson of obedience, keeping fit and strong and the will to win and the necessity of a goal. At the close of the Rev. Mr. Lytle's address, Mrs. Paul Owens gave a reading, "What William Henry Did Next" and responded with an encore. Mrs. Poy Coffelt, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. J. C. Denham, sang a group of war songs, which were well received.

At the close of the meeting a campfire was held and short talks were given by S. T. Baker, D. R. Brewer and Mr. Illiffe.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

BE READY—Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.—Matthew 24:44.

AN OLD TRAGEDY

A hundred and fifty years ago last week General Benedict Arnold kept his tryst with the enemy. A thicket of firs below Stony Point screened him from an abhorrent moon, while he plotted to betray the cause for which previously he risked so much. The sesquicentenary of this darkest deed in American history is not being advertised today by fanfares or commemorative stamps; but the deed itself contained a lesson, as yet apparently but dimly perceived, which deserves wider recognition than it is likely soon to receive from those most in need of it.

The fashion of absorbing Arnold's luciferian fall to injured pride cannot be accepted by those who are familiar with a certain type of super-refined mind, as exclusive. Arnold was as proud and sensitive as he was brave; but to attribute his diabolical act solely to a sense of personal injury is to leave unexplained that love of country which motivated his heroism during the first five years of the revolution. Such love is not so suddenly killed, although it may be diverted into channels inexplicable to the unimaginative mind.

Arnold's treason was born in Philadelphia, where he had been put in command, after the wound received at Saratoga had forced him out of active service. There he lived in a loyalist atmosphere. There, too, abundant opportunity was given him to reflect on the personal injuries done him by the cowardly Gates and a factional congress. There finally, with his shattered leg keeping him out of action and with the "mutilated alliance" with France festering in his soul, Arnold saw an aspect of "patriotism" that was new to him. The fatherland of his dreams gradually turned into a bunch of greedy old men, with dirty neckcloths and scup-burnished waistcoats, whose seniority or subservience had raised to the easy chairs where they had grown fat wrangling vile politics, while he and his men had been starving on the march of Quebec.

Some men idealize the objects of their industry and devotion. They crave the opportunity to serve, without thought of self. The denial or curtailment of this opportunity by seniors who are mindful of self alone is gall and wormwood to them. They see in this prevention of using their demonstrated abilities for the benefit of the object they are eager to serve, an injury to the latter. That is what cuts them to the quick. Arnold was the type of man who will sell his soul for woman; yet stabs her to death in a momentary frenzy of disillusionment, when he sees her prostituted to the greed of other men who are using her for a meal ticket. Such devotion is capable of great good; also, it thwarted, capable of inspiring despair or dark deeds in ardent and impatient minds.

If John J. Raskob really has loaned the Democratic national committee another $40,000, he is one example of man who really enjoys throwing good money after bad. No wonder they keep him on the job.

It has come to the point where the quickest way to fame of a sort, is to suggest the twelve to a hundred most famous somebody or something or other.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

IGNORANCE

Henry Ford is right when he says "there is nothing in life to be afraid of." Much fear comes from ignorance—ignorance of the world about us, misunderstanding of our friends and of ourselves.

HE FEEDS AND CLOTHES A WORLD

L. F. Miller, who knows much of farms and farmers, calls the column's attention to the "unknown farmer." Much talk about the farmer these days. He is often represented as complaining, unhappy, unsuccessful. But that description comes usually from those who know the farmer least. Read these lines, author unknown, and ponder:

"There should be erected a monument to the unknown farmer, the man who lives and dies a life of service to others, unheralded and unsung. On his feet should be a pair of hobnailed boots, scarred and worn from following the plow. His trousers should be plain and creaseless in deference to his qualities of homeliness and self-effacement, patched as an emblem of sacrifice. On his back should be a flannel shirt, open at the throat, representative of hardihood, self-reliance, independence. On his head should rest the broad-brimmed hat of honesty and good-fellowship. Although the weight of the world may bear down on his broad shoulders his eyes look up, a challenge that, whatever load may press, his soul and spirit shall remain free and triumphant.

Legion is the name of this unknown farmer. He lives in your county and in my county. He dwells on the plains of the Texas panhandle and in the furthest recesses of the Kentucky mountains. "This unknown farmer doesn't amount to very much. He doesn't make a great deal of noise. He is seldom acclaimed in the headlines. Public speeches are a bit out of his line. He flies no red flags. He lives unobtrusively, taking care of his family and sending his boys to the very best schools that he can afford. At elections he votes his convictions. Ben Franklin would have liked him, for he is one of the great average.

"No monument has ever been erected to this unknown farmer, for he is seldom thought of in the mental shuffles. He really doesn't figure very big. All he does is feed and clothe the world."

IDEAS

Herman Levy, ex-newsboy, New York, does a million-dollar-a-year business in leasing and renting out offices. He leases floor space and puts in any kind of office you want, including private secretary, stenographers, and furniture, if you wish. Levy, still a young man, had nothing to start with—except an idea. To get ideas means to think. To think is difficult. The play is easy.

DISCRIMINATING INDEED

Mary Anderson, head of the woman's bureau of the labor department, Washington, pleads for less sex discrimination in awarding jobs. One would expect a man, not a woman, to make such a plea. Factories are full of women doing work that a man once did.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK CITY, New York.—Now that Walter Huston has rung the bell in the D. W. Griffith film, Abraham Lincoln, stage folk are wondering whether he'll survive the "curse" that has overtaken so many actors who have essayed that particular role.

When an actor once "does" Lincoln, it is said, he clings to the stride, mannerisms and whiskers forever after, thereby unfixing him for other parts.

PROVOKED.

Benjamin Chapin, who appeared as the Great Emancipator a dozen years ago, used the stride around the Globe Theatre in his permanent make-up, to the annoyance of everyone.

He became involved in a dispute with a supersensitive scene shifter one evening and the urbane Charles Dillingham took a hand, in the interest of discipline.

In his private office he told the mummer that if he insisted upon stalking round the theatre looking like Lincoln, the management would expect him to act like Lincoln. Chapin, instead of taking the suggestion in good part, provoked the impresario until he shouted:

"Look here! You've got the Lincoln complex so bad you won't be happy till you're assassinated! I'm a man of peace; but if I catch you backstage again, making trouble, I'll bring about your dearest wish, if I have to do the job myself with a stage brace!"

THEME SMELLS.

The Shiftin' Picture lads are centering a new attack, this time on the Customers' snoots.

They're introducing in the theatres what they call "Theme Smells"—odors to match certain outstanding scenes. A scented pellet is dropped into the ventilating system of the theatre, or a number of pellets are used, and the result is a sequence of scents.

Of course the idea is yet in the "experim'ntation" stage. At present the most obvious effects are being sought, like releasing a clover smell to match a hay-mow scene.

Later on, geniuses will be put to work to match moods, to translate the psychic into quivering, long-drawn and tremulous suggestions of fragrance.

THE KIND OF KICKING WE LIKE TO SEE

RUMORS THAT 4 PER CENT BEER MAY BE MADE BEGINNING OCT. 1 ARE FANTASTIC CONCEPTION OF LAW

WASHINGTON. — Congressman Melvin J. Maas of Minnesota may really believe what he asserted in a speech in St. Paul recently—that G. O. P. leaders deliberately started rumors (to see how the public would react to them) that four per cent beer-making is to be permitted to start about Oct. 1.

Or maybe Maas said it to see how the G. O. P. leaders would react to his assertion.

It is a fact that such rumors have been in circulation for several weeks. Queries concerning them have been arriving from all directions at the Washington offices of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and association officials admit having suspected the very thing that Representative Maas so flat-footedly states. However, they were far from sure of it. If Maas has more definite information than they have, they would like to be told.

The Minnesota congressman's explanation of the rumors has had one noticeable effect anyway—it has served to concentrate attention upon a number of little accidents and utterances which probably otherwise would have been practically unheeded, but which may have a certain amount of significance, taken in the aggregate.

Illustratively, it is unlikely that Senator Frederic C. Walcott's remarks at the Republican convention in his home state of Connecticut would have been so much commented on but for Maas' talk in St. Paul.

Assuming that he spoke for himself alone, the complaint of "intolerable prohibition conditions," attributed to the senator, might be regarded as an expression simply of his individual feeling, but the Maas hint that it is an opinion shared in by at least some few G. O. P. leaders gives it decidedly greater importance—especially coupled with the nutmeg statesman's assurance to the convention that the administration can be trusted to solve the wet-and-dry problem when the Wickersham anti-crime commission reports—coupled also with the knowledge that Senator Walcott is reckoned very close to the president, emphatically is personal grata at the White House, and lives in Washington in the old Hoover home at 2300 S street.

The Maas version, it is true, linked the unemployment situation rather than the Wickersham commission's investigations with the beer-making rumors; yet there is not necessarily any inconsistency in this after all.

The Wickersham researchers, it seems, lately have been weighing the effect of unemployment as a crime factor, and there is excellent ground for the belief that they have concluded it weighs heavily, leading to a supplementary inquiry to determine if prohibition, in turn, has reduced the country's number of jobs appreciably.

How the commission will decide this question remains to be seen, but it is certain that the American Federation of Labor's executive committee, in session at Atlantic City in September, was informed by the brewing interests that the reopening of their plants to production of a more salable beverage than the present law allows would speedily furnish work, directly and indirectly, to 2,000,000 men—besides creating an annual market for $110,000,000 worth of raw material from American farms.

All of which, though it may sound like a wet argument, is intended only to throw whatever light may be possible upon Representative Maas' assertion.

Of illumination from any other quarter there evidently is not a hope.

Executive offices—treasury, justice, agriculture, commerce and labor departments—all have been queried by scores of intensely curious investigators, for so much as a single candle power ray on the subject. Not a glimmer has been found to account for the mysterious rumors.

Regardless of their origin, of course, it is perfectly safe to disregard the notion that high-powered beer production has been considered—outside bootleg circles—by as early a date as Oct. 1—or without modification of the present law.

Equally fantastic is the idea, advanced from irresponsible sources, that a justice department ruling, holding beer non-intoxicating, would legalize its manufacture in excess of a one-half of 1 per cent alcoholic content.

Perhaps it would, temporarily—but imagine such a ruling!

The Volstead act, unlike the Eighteenth amendment, can, as the whole country undoubtedly is aware, be modified by a simple congressional majority—but congress will not meet until December, unless by special presidential call, and even Representative Maas has not heard rumors of an extra session to repeal prohibition.

But, for that matter, Mr. Maas does not guarantee the 4 per cent rumors' accuracy.

He says only that G. O. P. leaders deliberately stated them—as what statesmen call "trial balloons."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Veal with Mushrooms
Broccoli
Parsley Potatoes
Beets in Onion Circles
Bran Muffins
Jelly Roll
Tea
This menu will serve six people. The veal is an economical and tasty dish. The mushrooms may be omitted if desired.

Today's Recipes

Veal with Mushrooms—Buy veal from shank, about two pounds. Cut in pieces two by three inches, roll in salted flour, sear in hot fat, but do not brown. Place in a deep saucepan with a bay leaf, one tablespoon of tarragon vinegar, one dozen small white onions and boiling water to cover. Cook for 40 minutes on a moderate fire, add one-fourth pound of sliced mushrooms and cook five minutes more. Lastly add one-half cup cream or top milk and two tablespoonsful of minced parsley and roux to thicken. Roux is made by combining flour and fat in the proportion of one and one-half tablespoonsful of fat to one tablespoonful of flour and cooking the mixture till it bubbles evenly. Added to hot liquids it gives a uniformly velvety sauce.

Suggestions

Grape Sunshine Wash and pulp grapes. Cook until seeds leave pulp, remove seeds in colander, then mix pulp and skins. To one cup fruit add two cups sugar, boil eight minutes after coming to a rolling boil. Skim, pour into glasses and garnish.

Laundry Help

After thoroughly washing an ordinary salt bag one housewife hemmed the top and ran a string through it, first filling the lower half with cotton and stretching it through the center. The lower half was used as a pin cushion and the upper half for buttons and other odd articles that turn up in the laundry. It was hung over the laundry tubs.

New Dessert—Nut Cluster Shells. One cup whipped cream, one cup of nut cluster candy, pastry shells. Put the nut cluster candy, other chocolate coated or plain, through a food chopper. Add to the whipped cream and serve in pastry shells. May also be used as a rich topping for plain cup cakes.

Important Trifles

When making jelly you will find it is an excellent idea to use a small tea strainer to skim the jelly. It is very quickly done without the slightest waste of juice.

You will save time and cut your fingers if when canning you dip the rubber in hot water and fit to jar before the jar is filled.

A good way to teach children to do and like housework is to let them draw slips on which is written some new duty to perform. Call it a new game.

Losing Flesh Easier Than Gaining

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Nearly as many people ask me how to get fat as ask me how to get thin.

Both are tough jobs. As everyone knows who has ever tried. It is easy to make rules, but hard to follow them out. Make no mistake about it. If you are out to change your weight you have to work.

To get a thin person fat, however, is really a harder piece of work than to get a fat person thin. It is possible in every case to reduce if the fat one will just work hard enough. But you take a real natural thin one and there are times, no matter what you do, when you cannot get her any heavier.

This is largely due to the fact that the constitutionally thin person simply cannot stuff too much food into himself. His very thinness goes with a dropped stomach and a dropped set of intestines and he is not designed for a great deal of eating. He usually has stomach troubles of one kind or another.

Of course in certain instances there may be actual disease present. There may be tuberculosis. If it is an old chronic fibroid type there will be no cough—none of the ordinary signs of tuberculosis.

In other instances diabetes may be present. The likelihood of its presence should be more easily suspected. The onset is usually fairly abrupt. The weight loss occurs rapidly, and hunger, frequent urination and great thirst go along with it.

Other chronic diseases which cause thinness are goiter of the exophthalmic type, and a rare disease of the nervous and muscular system causing atrophy. In acute conditions such as pneumonia or influenza the body loses a great deal of weight, but this is known and easily recognized.

What we are talking about here is none of these. We are talking of the constitutionally thin person. Born thin—never gets any fatter.

Usually tall—at any rate of narrow, slender build. Vertical as the crossword puzzle. Hands would say not horizontal. There are several kinds of people in the world—draught horses and race horses—St. Bernards and greyhounds. The constitutionally thin person is the greyhound.

With the external conformation go certain peculiarities in the arrangement of the internal organs. The chest is very long and narrow. The lungs are enormous. They can breathe in and out twice as much air as the fat horizontal persons. The abdominal wall usually sags. The stomach hangs very low. It is hard for the stomach to push food out of its opening (the pylorus) into the intestines. The intestines themselves hang very low in the abdomen. These people are usually constipated. Their muscles have not the body nor the strength that other people's have.

With all these difficulties it is no wonder the fattening cure must take into account the whole body. How that cure can be arranged we will take up in detail tomorrow.

(EDITORS NOTE: Dr. Clending cannot diagnose or give personal answers to letters from readers. Where questions are of general interest, however, they will be taken up, in order, in the daily column. Girl Told To Talk To Parents

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

WHEN IS A HOME not a home? The answer is, when there is one too many people in it.

In other words, when an outsider comes in and dominates the place, disregarding the rights of others.

Such a situation has been created in the home of a girl who writes:

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I wrote you a long time ago for advice and you helped me so much that I am coming for more.

"Three months ago my grandmother came to live with us and mother was delighted to have her. She, of course, is old and hard to suit, and is continually nagging and bawling the whole family out. If I ask for potatoes for the second time she insists that I have had all I'm going to and refuses to pass them to me. Mother thinks it's a big joke and laughs. Daddy usually takes my side.

"I work out and pay board. Grandmother doesn't pay anything. She sleeps on the davenport in the parlor, as our house is small, and I cannot entertain my friends. I have a friend who comes a great distance to see me every week-end, and it hurts me dreadfully when I have to tell him that we will have to go some place because I can't entertain at home.

"What am I to do? Board away from home, where it will at least be peaceful and no one will be nagging at me, and where I can have my friends?

"I am 19 and have a good position. Why should mother desert the rest of us and take grandma's side in every argument? We were all so happy together before our permanent visitor came. Funny how black the world can be after years of happiness.

MOLLY JEAN

Yes, it is odd how black the world can seem after years of joy. Molly Jean, and then, after the darkness, how bright it may again become. And isn't it odd how much unhappiness one incurs, selfish person can make in a home?

If your grandmother is your mother's mother, I suppose she has been accustomed to thinking that her mother is always right and should have her own way. Your father naturally doesn't like to say too much and make his wife's mother feel unwelcome, so there you are.

I think that as long as you can't entertain in the parlor, another room in the house should be set aside for you to have your friends. Talk the matter over with your parents, especially with your father, as he seems to stand by you.

Of course no one is to blame that the house is small and that there is no bedroom for your grandmother, and I suppose it is necessary for her to live with you. You would not, of course, want her to be thrown out into the world.

Don't leave home if you can possibly help it. You would probably be unhappy and lonely in a boarding house after living at home. It does seem to me that your parents should make some provision for you, without hurting your grandmother's feelings much. One has to show her some consideration, too, you know.

DOUBLE CROSSED: Why don't you take other girls out, and only ask your friend for a date occasionally? I think that would be the most sensible thing to do. That would give her a chance to see if she really was getting tired of you and could be contented to see you with others, or whether she wanted to have you steady.

These breaks in friendship are very painful, I know, but very often they are for the best in the end and almost everyone has a few of them before they finally settle down. Good luck to you.

L. The boy friend hardly seems to be playing fair, does he? Suppose you tell him that as long as he goes with others and disappoints you, you will do likewise. Two can play at that game, you know.

J. H. TEEN: If you are sure your friend is going to see your cousin and is taking her out, go out yourself with other boys, and if he asks you why, tell him. Be sure of your facts, however.

Take Advice of Surgeon

By GLADYS GLAD

Some women take keen delight in recounting to their associates the gruesome details of their "operations." And yet women are surprisingly reticent about their facial operations. Although I do not wish to encourage the "operation" braggers, nose operations are really so numerous today that such reticence is unnecessary.

After all, there is no reason to consider an attempt to attain beauty as a blot on the family escutcheon.

The simplest nasal operation, and the one most commonly performed by plastic surgeons, is to reduce the size of the nose. Hooked and bulbous noses can be transformed into beautifully formed facial appendages. The well-known comedienne, Fanny Brice, had her large nose made smaller by plastic surgery.

The usual operation to make the nose smaller or shorter consists merely of the removal of a bit of cartilage from the tip of the nose. This is done by making a slit in the skin in the nostril, and through that artificial aperture, remove the necessary piece of cartilage. When sufficient has been removed the cut is stitched and a bit of adhesive is placed over the end of the nose to mould it into the desired shape.

Most women prefer to stay at home, unobserved, while the adhesive remains on the nose. About three days after the operation the adhesive is removed. However, the surgical thread is still present in the nostrils. It is not removed until a period of about ten days has elapsed.

Ordinarily, the plastic surgeon tells you how to treat the nose while it is healing. The usual treatment at that time is merely frequent swabbings with a solution of boric acid. Sometimes after the operation, the nose swells a bit. But the swelling disappears rapidly.

I want to advise all who have such operations performed to follow the instructions for "after care," given by the surgeon who operated. Do not use any metho advised by friends or wise people who think they know more than the surgeon.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

Gray Hair Curious: I know of no natural way of restoring gray hair to its original color. The only remedy to have your hair dyed. Have the dyeing done by an expert who understands the work, rather than by yourself.

Plastic Surgeon F. R.: You may inquire as to the professional standing of any plastic surgeon at your local department of health. This organization will be glad to give you the information you desire.

Only Hair Jean and Anxious: Use a dry hair rinse on your hair to remove the excess oil. Lemon and vinegar rinses are effective. Also, a teaspoonful of baking soda added to the last rinse water will help make your hair fluffy.

Emulating the Salvation Army motto, Xenia Central High gridders may be down but they aren't out by any means.

Crushed by Washington C. H., 37 to 0, in their season's opener last Friday, the Buccaneers will be called upon to face their oldest rival, Wilmington High at Wilmington Friday afternoon this week.

The 37 to 0 defeat, by the way, was the second worst set back suffered by a Xenia eleven at the hands of a Washington team since 1911. The Blue Lion team of 1916 beat Xenia, 49 to 7.

Xenia has lost to Washington for the last three straight years and in the last twenty-one games between these two schools Washington teams have won eleven, with nine victories for Xenia teams and one scoreless tie.

Wilmington, Xenia's next foe, opened its season Friday by swamping Reading, 53 to 0 without being extended and also, you may be sure, without opening up its complete bag of tricks.

The Quaker school is represented by virtually the same aggregation which overwhelmed the Bucs last fall. Therefore, Xenia is none too hopeful of victory. But the Bucs are a courageous lot and if they are beaten Friday, it will not be because they played halfheartedly.

The Washington defeat, although it was one-sided, should not discourage the boys. This game is now history and should be forgotten. Better times are coming. Mistakes in the first game of the season are always plentiful and must be expected. They can be remedied and many glaring weaknesses will doubtless be corrected in practice this week.

Wilmington this year has a backfield combination just about on a par with Washington if not better. Captain Rose is the feet-footed boy who ran wild against the Bucs last fall but Wilmington also has other brilliant backs in Hatt and Hutchens. A 210-pound fullback, who blocks well and provides good interference, may slow up the team's offensive somewhat on spinner plays and the line.

The Wilmington line is said to be well balanced and heavy, except at the guards and center.

The comment has been heard more than once in the past few weeks that the odds are against Xenia gridders this season for one reason because of the manner in which the schedule was arranged. We are in receipt of this letter from a football fan.

Dear Phil: Xenia High's defeat at the hands of Washington C. H. Friday should be chalked up as an error against the schedule-maker. Any one who has ever played high school football knows that green, inexperienced players react nervously in their first game. This nervous condition results in an actual physical weakness and is sometimes accompanied by nausea. The best method to season green players for a campaign is to pit them against a comparatively weak team for the first game so that they gain confidence with success. It is also wise to play the first game at home, before a home crowd. Even one seasoned player on Xenia's team admitted he suffered from physical weakness brought on by nervous strain during the first half of the Washington game. Xenia's schedule-makers were at fault in booking a strong game away from home for the opener and then booking the O. S. and S. O. Home, a comparatively weak team, for late in the season, and playing three league games in a row without a breathing spell.

We'll, we picked seventeen winners out of seventeen collegiate football games Saturday for a 1,000 percentage but the games were so one-sided that we won't even bother to repeat the scores. From now on we will let some one else pick them every week. Winners will be increasingly difficult to predict every week for the remainder of the season, so that is why we decided to do the picking the first week in order to make our guesses look pretty good before the upsets begin to take place.

CONFERENCE TEAMVeteran Borst Eleven
Forced To Accept
47 to 0 Defeat

A diversified offensive carried the University of Cincinnati to a lopsided 47 to 0 triumph over Cedarville College in the inaugural football game of the season for both teams Saturday night at Carson Field, Cincinnati.

Governor Myers Y. Cooper was among the spectators at the game, which marked the beginning of the ninth season of night football at Carson Field, Cincinnati being the first school in the country to play under the flood lights.

Ed Seidinger, halfback, who ran fifteen yards around end, scored the first Bearcat touchdown in the opening period. Hallett went back from tackle to kick the extra point but the center pass was bad.

The Borstmen attempted only one forward pass in the first half and this was intercepted in the second period by Fullback Goldmeyer, who scampered twenty yards for a touchdown. Hallett's kick was wide of the uprights.

Near the close of the first half Gilliland took the ball on Cedarville's thirty-five yard stripe, made eighteen yards and on three successive line plunges went over for Cincinnati's third touchdown. The extra point was added by Hallett from placement.

Cincinnati's grid machine gathered momentum as the game progressed. The Bearcats rolling up three more touchdowns in the third quarter and another marker in the final period.

Ed Seidinger, sophomore half back, stood out among the ball carriers. Carlton "Whitely" Lunsford, Xenia boy, played left end for the Bearcats.

Despite the fact it possessed a veteran team, the same outfit which last season held Cincinnati to a 19 to 0 score, Cedarville did not make much of a showing until the late period. In the final quarter the Yellow-Jackets opened an aerial attack and completed ten out of fourteen forward passes to register six first downs.

Next Saturday Cedarville visits Otterbein College at Westerville, O. Summary:

WOOSTER COACH HAS DIFFICULT
TASK TO KEEP UP FINE RECORD

By JOSEPH K. RUKENBROD
I. N. S. Sports Writer

WOOSTER, O., Sept. 29.—L. C. Boles, master builder of football teams, faces one of his toughest assignments this year as he begins his fifteenth consecutive year as coach of Wooster College.

The wave of economy which has struck the country seems to have included the entire Boles squad, for there is an extreme dearth of lettermen and veterans this year. But there is still the same clamor for a winning team from old man general public.

Boles will have a hard time in building a good team, but followers of Wooster are expecting him to do just that. They look back over fifteen years during which Boles' teams have won eighty-six football games while losing only twenty-one. Ten games ended in ties during this period. During four of the fifteen years, Wooster was undefeated.

Eleven of last year's lettermen failed to return. Graduation took Captain Black guard; Kallio, center, and Meier and Donley, his understudies; Bing, guard; Bishop, tackle; Dave and Bill Query, half back; and Bob Runyan, fullback.

Jim Donley, end, and Reidt, kick off king from Oklahoma, did not return to school.

Of the eight lettermen who have reported back this year, the brightest star is Cliff Nelson, last year's sophomore quarterback, whose playing was one of the features of Ohio gridiron clashes. Nelson's headwork and general all-around play was a big cog in Wooster's success last year and he is counted on again as the mainstay of the team.

Captain Don Haines and Tibby Young will also be in the backfield. Lettermen on the forward wall are Bridenstine, Romig, Miller and Harold Haines, twin brother of the captain. Other members of the 1929 team who will probably see service are Howers, Pfeister, Price, Ward, Lathrop and Tannehill.

Of last year's freshman crew, the most likely candidates are Rumbaugh, center, Small and Go-shorts and Dooley, the 18-year-old pitcher who pitched such a brilliant game for the idle Hour boys before, will attempt to duplicate his previous performance.

HOMER ALLOWS MERCHANTS TO BEAT YELLOW SPRINGS SUNDAY

Moore's home run with Durnbaugh on first base after two were out in the fourth inning enabled the Xenia Merchants to register a 3 to 1 victory over the Yellow Springs Athletics in the opener of a three-game series Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Jasper Ankeney, Zimmerman, hooked up with Gibson, pitcher for Yellow Springs, in a tight mount battle, each hurler allowing only three hits.

For the first seven innings Ankeney did not yield a single hit but his dream of a no-hit game was spoiled in the seventh round when the Athletics bunched two singles with two errors to score their one run, which was unearned.

Only one batter reached first base off Ankeney in the first seven innings and this was in the second stanza when Hackett muffed Ruse's throw to first on Brewer's ground. The batter took second on the error and went to third on an out at first but was stranded when Mercer popped to the pitcher.

In the seventh, with one down, Durnbaugh hit to Durnbaugh. No player is infallible and the Merchant center fielder muffed the fly for the first time in many moons. Then Bales, first baseman, obtained the first Yellow Springs hit, a single to left which advanced Day to second. Brewer forced Bales at second, Day taking third and he scored a moment later when Johnson in left field dropped Reynolds' fly. Mercer followed with a single to right but Kelter lofted to Johnson for the third out. The only other Yellow Springs safe hit came in the ninth when Bales doubled to left with one down and was left there.

Gibson also pitched an airtight game for the visitors but Moore's circuit court brought about his downfall. He pitched hitless ball for three rounds and got the first two batters who faced him in the fourth. Then Durnbaugh singled to center and Moore hit for all the bases, the ball going through the center field fence.

The third Xenia run in the seventh inning was unearned. Ruse led off with a single to left and stole second and third as Blake fled to left and Hackett fanned. Day made an error on Ankeney's grounder and Ruse crossed the

PIQUA, TROY LOOP

Four of the six Miami Valley League schools played football games Saturday afternoon. Piqua and Troy winning their games, while Miamisburg and Sidney were defeated. Greenville and Xenia Central were idle Saturday.

Piqua High opened its grid campaign auspiciously by downing Eaton, 38 to 0, while Troy High, registering nineteen first downs to a score of 12 to 0, defeated Arcanum, 12 to 0.

Miamisburg's scrappy eleven, which is favored to be Piqua's principal rival in the race for the 1930 league grid title, went down to defeat in a game with Dayton Roosevelt High, 13 to 0, while Sidney High was noosed out by the O. S. and S. O. Home eleven of Xenia, 7 to 6.

HOME CADETS DE FEAT SIDNEY
HIGH WITH NARROW 7-6 MARGIN

The truth will out; this is not the title of a detective story, but a plain statement of fact that the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home football team is one sweet football club this season.

This opinion is based upon the team's performance in its inaugural game Saturday afternoon at Sidney when the Cadets gave fair warning they have another fine grid team by handing Sidney High School a 7 to 6 defeat by the margin of the point after touchdown.

For the first three quarters the rival teams had struggled on even terms with neither goal line crossed, but in the fourth period the Cadets got a break—or rather they made their own break.

Sidney attempted to punt out of danger from deep in its own territory but Sam King, left tackle, knifed through the line and blocked the ball with his outstretched arms. Quick as a flash Clyde Badel, left guard, pounced on the place kick which would have tied the score was wide of its mark, leaving the Home with a one-point advantage.

Each team made four first downs during the game. The cadets completed five out of six passes while Sidney completed one out of four aerials and had two intercepted. The Home gained a total of 176 yards from scrimmage as compared with 160 yards for Sidney.

Kritzer was the biggest gainer for either team advancing the ball fifty-eight yards. McKinley's punts averaged thirty-seven yards and he reeled off gains to tallying fifty-four yards. Kaufman gained fifty-two yards and the entire team played well.

Next Friday afternoon the Home eleven faces the Bath Twp. High School team on the Osborn diamond. Summary:

The world series of 1930, regardless of how well or poorly played the games may be, will exhibit about the greatest catching talent one ball park has ever contained.

Mickey Cochrane, the brilliant Athletics' maskman, and called by many the greatest catcher of all time, is the outstanding exhibit in the mask and mitt department. Mickey has everything a good catcher should have to excel at his trade. He is easily the outstanding receiver to enter the great fall games.

And to back up Cochrane should something happen to the star, Connie Mack has two men who were star receivers in their day and are still good enough to do duty behind the bat. These are Ralph Perkins, who received the slants of all the Athletic hurlers for many years before Cochrane appeared, and Wally Schang, one of Connie's pre-war stars and who was one of the New York Yankees when that team reigned supreme on the baseball heights.

These three men give the Athletics the edge on the Cardinals who, however, have no reason to apologize for their catchers. St. Louis' manager, Gabby Street, declares his two young receivers, Gus Mancuso and Jimmy Wilson, make up the best staff in the National League, and Street ought to know, having caught himself. As an emergency Street has Earl (Oli) Smith, one-time Pittsburgh star.

When the Chicago Cubs were leading the National League fans looked forward to seeing how the Cubs' capable receiver, Gabby Hartnett, one of the best catchers in the National League for years, would compare with Cochrane. Hartnett being kept out of the 1929 world series by injuries. However, at this writing, the Cubs and Hartnett have little chance to meet the A's.

POLE-SITTER DEAD

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—His daring as a light-pole sitter cost Joseph Rinero, 32, his life. It was decided today when authorities learned he had touched a high tension wire and was electrocuted after scrambling to the top of a light pole.

As he waved to his admiring family on the ground, Rinero touched the wire and fell to the ground dead.

SCOUT NEWS

Troop 45, Boy Scouts, will meet at the Scout Cabin Tuesday evening at 5:30 to cook supper and go on a hike in charge of J. F. Moitor, assistant scoutmaster. All are asked to be present.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Both the grain market and the stock market started the new week in unsettled condition. First prices for important railroad stocks showed a loss of 2 points in the maximum, with fractional changes in the lower priced shares. Wheat and corn slumped off from 2 to 2 1/2 cents a bushel at the opening, as the result of liberal selling by commission houses and local traders. Call money renewed at 1 1/2 per cent for the first time in fifteen years.

With the recovery of the opening losses by the wheat market in a sharp rally in the second hour, stocks also made a brave effort to regain their lost ground. The blue-chip industrials were the leaders in this move, U. S. Steel rallying from 157 7/8 to above 160, Radio up a point at 29 1/2; General Electric up 1 1/4 at 84 and American Tel. and Tel. up about 2 points at 207. American Can, which started the day at 120 1/8, sold 3 1/2 points higher, in the second hour. Radio and amusement stocks also sold higher.

Weakness in the oil stocks was the unsettling feature of the industrial list. Texas Corporation lost about 2 points at 45 1/2 and new losses of a point or less were recorded for a dozen or more of the well known standard and independent oils.

CHAPTER 57

Kitty telephoned the hospital the next morning at eight o'clock.

Mr. Platt, she learned would be discharged at eleven.

"Will you tell him, please, that Miss Wilmet will call for him in a taxi at that hour?" she said simply.

She felt curiously light hearted. Edith, his desire to be "rid of her"—they could wait. They were not true! She didn't know how—she couldn't fathom it, but the memory of Gordon's words on the tug were stronger than that of the words she had heard him say to Edith.

She had promised "for as long as you want me, dear." She felt again the feeble pressure of an arm about her; as in a dream she knew again the soft touch of his lips against hers.

"I don't understand—it's all impossible, but I know I am wrong!" she admitted in a flash of understanding she cried to herself—"Why that's the first time I've been willing to admit I was wrong before it was proved to me! Love does strange things!"

The hours until eleven seemed very long. She thought of going to the office, but knew she would not work. Moreover, she did not want to see Mr. Goss. Her heart bled for him; rude, uncouth, peculiar as he was, the fact remained that the Wall Street king, who had tried to give his office force pleasure must now be in the grip of a grief unmeasurable. Twenty-two men and women who had started out so light heartedly last year—last week—could it only have been yesterday?—were now cold and pale in death. The papers told her that all the missing had not been recovered.

She mourned in her heart for Joe Fortune. Poor Joe, so fat, so healthy, so happy—and no one could save him! He would be sadly missed, she thought. The importance of all that had seemed great the day before receded. It didn't matter, about the leak. It didn't matter whether Morton De Witt was convicted of kidnapping or not. She didn't care whether she ever recognized the others or not.

But in spite of grief, death, the revolution in her life, one fact stood out above all others in Kitty's mind. "He loves me! I don't know how, or why, but I don't want I thought. He didn't want to get rid of me—it's not Edith!"

Half past ten!

Kitty took a taxi to Bellevue and tapped impatiently on the office counter and waited. Then they brought Gordon to her, his arm in a sling.

He greeted her with a smile, but no words. Only when she turned rather helplessly to give directions to the taxi driver, did he speak.

"We are going to Goss's," he announced. "He won't have it any other way. And you are coming with me!"

In the taxi, regardless of passers by, he put the one good arm around her and kissed her.

"Oh, my dear, my dear," he murmured. "It's been so long!"

"Hush!" she whispered. "Don't talk now. Let's wait until—until we can be alone!"

He nodded. He held her hand all the way up the Avenue; the short-cut ride, Kitty thought, she had never taken.

Mr. Goss's house was large and elaborate; Kitty didn't see it. Mr. Goss's servants were attentive and numerous; Kitty brushed them aside. "Mr. Goss himself, white faced and drawn, bade her a brief welcome. There was no rudeness in his voice. Then he left them together in a sitting room in the suite he had assigned to Gordon.

At last they were alone.

"I just can't take it in!" cried Gordon, holding out his arm to her. "One thing I've got to know—the man you said you were going to marry—is he saved?"

"I am not going to marry Bert Croymore—or anyone but—her!" she confessed.

He held her in his arm. "I don't want to talk. I just want to feel!" he whispered. "But there are things that must be said. Will you tell me, dear, why you left me?"

What you think—I mean thought—I did have done?"

Did the man really not know? It wasn't possible and yet—it was a fact! She believed it even while her mind told her that it was impossible!

He interrupted her thoughts.

"My darling! If you knew how I have suffered! If you knew how my heart had been torn, you'd tell me!"

The puzzle had to be solved!

"I looked over the transom in Edith's home the night you sat in her chair, with her on the floor, her arms about you, and heard you say you wanted to get rid of me!" answered Kitty.

His jaw dropped. Blank amazement registered on his face.

"Heard me say I wanted to get rid of you—one of us is crazy!" he cried.

"You said 'I'll get rid of her for you—'" answered Kitty.

Slowly the incomprehension changed in his eyes; dawned knowledge, and something else, something strange, something altogether out of place. To Kitty's confusion and indignation Gordon Platt threw back his head and laughed until he cried, then wept until he laughed again. It was the first time Kitty had ever seen a man in hysterics, the more terrible as Gordon Platt was usually so stern, so dignified, so self-contained, so efficient.

But she could not stand his weeping! When he finally choked down the last gasp with his head in her arms and her face close to his.

"My poor, precious child!" he murmured. "How terrible, how awful—and how funny! Listen!" he demanded. "I pledged my word long ago to keep my mouth shut, but not to destroy my own happiness and yours!"

"I said I would get rid of a 'her'—but I didn't mean you. And I am not now, never was, never could be, anything to poor Edith but a good friend. I think I've been that. I knew her as a child. I grew up with her. Then she—she came to the city and got married!"

"Got married!" cried Kitty, wildly. "Is her husband living?"

"If he hasn't died since they took him off the boat yesterday afternoon, he is!" answered Gordon.

"But they are separated—have been for three years."

"Who—who is he," whispered Kitty.

"I'm afraid you'll be shocked!" answered Gordon. "They separated some time ago. She couldn't stand his drink, his running after other women, his general no-accountness. She asked me to help. I got him a job. He made good and partly reformed. But he wouldn't go back to poor Edith, who adores him. Then I got her a job with Goss, too. And I thought—I still think perhaps—I can bring him to his senses."

"But who—who is he?" cried Kitty.

"Atlee Wainwright!" answered Gordon.

Kitty sat stunned. It wasn't possible. Why, Atlee—Atlee had a "good" face! Atlee—had asked her to marry him! Atlee went constantly with Baby Ayers! Atlee—Edith's husband!

"I won't say he's entirely to blame," went on Gordon. "Edith was much too straight laced for him. She tried to hold him with too firm a hand. Once free of her after the separation, he found it difficult to go back. He hates me because I befriended Edith. I got her a job with Goss, where she could be near him, to see him every day. I promised both of them I wouldn't tell any one—neither wanted it known. Atlee wanted the freedom; Edith's pride couldn't bear to be known as a cast off wife, working in the same office with her husband."

"I want to see Edith that night to try to comfort her. I told her I would get rid of the woman who is taking so much of his attention—it's a tiny little blond girl—a Miss Ayers. But I couldn't do it until—well, until I learned something."

Kitty knelt down by the bed and put her arms about his neck. "Gordon, dear, will you forgive me?" she asked. "And—please, I didn't save the man I am going to marry—if he'll have me—ne was already saved when I found him with a broken arm."

She had her face! Kitty was not accustomed to proposing to men! But she felt she owed him that.

His free arm gathered her close. What he said in her ear is no one's business. Neither was their position the nurse's business; she came into the room, coughed and rattled a chair.

Kitty tried to get up, but Gordon's good arm held her tightly.

"I don't give a—anything for all the world!" he cried. "You are mine and I don't care who knows it!"

He drew her face to his and (nurse or no nurse) kissed her—a kiss in which utter love and trust and faith and a new pledge went from her to him—for all time to come.

The Theater

Now that she is able to get around on a crutch, Anna Q. Nilsson plans to leave for Sweden in November to visit her parents.

According to her present plans, she will remain there over the holidays, returning to Hollywood in the spring, by which time she expects to be able to make a comeback to the screen.

Anna's recovery from her hip injury has been a matter of many early months, most of which she spent in bed. Once, she was up and around, but too much activity brought on a relapse. When she fell from a horse and sustained her injury, the star was under contract to make a series of pictures for B-K-O. Betty Compson was signed to take her place.

A strenuous story of yellow journalism is promised in "Unit o' Print," George Bancroft's next or Paramount. The sleek Kay Francis is to be the girl over whom Dr. Bancroft, presumably, is torn between love and duty. She has an errand brother who is none other than Regis Toomey.

An ex-New York reporter, Oliver P. Garrett, has written the story and John Cromwell, who, in his acting days did the police captain in "The Racket," will direct.

A story from Hollywood concerns the old gentleman who summoned a waitress in a restaurant, pointed out a sailor and a girl sitting across the room, and said: "I want to pay that man's check. I was in the navy once myself and I know that sailors don't have much money. You just tell him, when he is ready to go, that a friend settled for him." The waitress bided her time and finally broke the news to the sailor. He got red in the face. "Say," he exclaimed, "I'm not a sailor! I'm a motion picture actor and I don't need any money." The benefactor, however, had left.

Ramon Novarro's versatility now expresses itself in directing. The Metro-Goldwyn Mayer star has just finished the Spanish version of "The Singer of Seville," in which he wielded the megaphone as well as acted. Next in line will be a French version, which he may also direct.

When Samuel Goldwyn saw the opening sequences of "The Prodigal," he walked out of the projection room and stood leaning against a building. Finally he called an assistant. "Cancel everything as of tonight," he ordered. As a result he dumped $100,000, the sum the picture had cost him to date, in the sink.

Dolores Del Rio, ill for a month, is better but is far from well. Doctors say that she must stay in bed for at least three more weeks. In the meantime United Artists is holding up "The Dove" pending her recovery.

Twenty Years '10- Ago -'30

Miss Daisy Clemens and her brother, Walter, are visiting in Orville, O., the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Clemens. Mr. Karl Knox, Xenia, has accepted a position with Hamm Bros., plumbers, in Dayton.

Recorder B. F. Thomas announces the office will be closed Friday afternoon while the front office is being plastered.

Forty neighbors and friends of Mr. Frank Street, Wilmington Pike, rendered him a kindly service when they gathered and cut a twenty-acre field of corn at his farm. The entire family has been ill with typhoid fever for several weeks.

THE FALLACY OF DEBUNKING

THERE HAS BEEN A TENDENCY in recent years to deride the old established institutions and to make light of certain things that have long been considered established facts. We have seen the modernistic tendency to "debunk" every known institution.

CERTAIN WRITERS HAVE TOLD US, for instance, that Shakespeare did not write the plays and poems credited to him. That the Bible is not Holy Writ. That Washington and Lincoln were not the persons history has made them, and that ministers, doctors, lawyers and business men are at best shallow dolts.

PERSONS WITH SOUND INTELLECT realize the fallacy in such assertions. We know that the works of Shakespeare are immortal and we can read them without a qualm as to authority of their authorship. We have faith in the Bible as the word of God. Washington and Lincoln will live forever as the outstanding heroes of the American republic, and nothing that can be said about our preachers, physicians, attorneys and captains of industry, will shake our faith in humanity.

LIKEWISE, WE PLACE NO FAITH IN THE DERISION of our home owned business houses. The claims of certain foreign owned chain organizations that they can outdo the local merchant in a business way, are just as shallow as all the "debunking" of other well established institutions. We all know that our entire scheme of living has been built upon local enterprise and local independence, not only of thought, but of industry, also.

THE HOME OWNED STORE will continue to prosper in spite of the encroachments of the foreign owned "big business" operations locally. For the public at large cannot accept a "debunking" for any length of time, regardless of the desultory interest that might be aroused. You can help "debunk the debunkers" by your continued patronage of your local Independent Merchant, and by that continued patronage, you will be adding to the prosperity and the independence of this community from foreign domination.
